Arrived in Washington at 10:20 a.m. It is a hot day--the temperature around 90 in the shade. McWilliams drove me home, and I spent the morning unpacking, and the afternoon going through mail and documents. The boys were wild with joy over the sight of E.

This evening, Hank Byroade and Jack Jernegan came to see me to show me a message ~~from~~ the British Government is sending to Middleton to present to Mossadeq. Mossadeq has refused to consider any arbitration that would consider claims of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company in excess of compensation for their physical installations. No settlement seems in near prospect.
